Submitting Your Dissertation or Thesis to ProQuest

There are a number of issues to consider as you prepare to submit your graduate work for publication.

If your university does not participate in ProQuest Dissertation Publishing program, you can still publish your work with us; use this form to request a publishing agreement.

Preparing your manuscript for submission

Depending on the method supported by your graduate school, you will submit your manuscript in one of three ways – as a paper copy we will scan, as a PDF file through our online submission tool (preferred), or via FTP site.

Electronic Submissions.

Online submission ensures that we receive the highest quality copy of your manuscript, with color images preserved. The most important consideration for you when you submit electronically is to be sure that you embed your fonts in the PDF you send us. For more direction on embedding fonts and other guidance, please see our Preparing Your Manuscript Guide.

FTP Submissions

The most important consideration for those who submit graduate works in PDF format via FTP is to adhere to our XML DTD (Document Type Definition). Please see our Electronic Submission to ProQuest using FTP for complete guidelines.

Paper Submissions

Some schools ship paper copies to us, which we scan as an image PDF during the publishing process. The most important consideration for you when you submit a paper copy is to ensure that the printing is high quality, with crisp, dark black characters for the best scanned copy. Please see our Preparing Your Manuscript Guide for more recommendations.

Author Agreement

Authors enter into a non-exclusive publishing agreement with ProQuest, where the author keeps the copyright in their graduate work. Authors are paid a 10% royalty for sales in all formats. See the full traditional publishing agreement.

Dissertation Publishing

Author Guide: Preparing Your Manuscript for Submission

Submit as a PDF

The manuscript of your dissertation or thesis must be submitted to ProQuest/UMI Dissertation Publishing in Adobe PDF format. When preparing your PDF, be sure to do the following:

- Embed all fonts (further information is provided below related to embedding fonts)
- Make sure there is no password protection on the PDF
- Ensure that security settings allow printing

Verify Proper Formatting

ProQuest/UMI Dissertation Publishing makes no changes to the formatting or content of submitted manuscripts. Therefore, the burden of how the manuscript looks when it is accessed or printed is entirely the responsibility of the author. ProQuest strongly recommends that individual authors take responsibility for reformatting the document into Adobe PDF, for checking the reformatted document for accuracy, and for submitting the PDF document to the graduate school or library for publication.

Abstract

We no longer have a word limit on your abstract, as this constrains your ability to describe your research, and therefore would constrain potential exposure of your work.

Please include an additional version of your abstract in English, even if the primary language of your dissertation or thesis is NOT English. For additional information regarding formatting of abstracts, please see the FAQ here:

<http://www.etsadmin.com/cgi-bin/main/faq?siteId=164#ts10>

Embargo Options

ProQuest Dissertation Publishing offers a number of mechanisms that can help address concerns about prior publication and its potential to impact future publishing opportunities. The following statement explains in detail how we assist author's with prior publication concerns.

Choosing Traditional or Open Access publishing

ProQuest Dissertation Publishing provides authors an open access publishing option called Open Access Publishing PLUS, in addition to the standard traditional publishing option. Which one is right for you? We recommend consulting with your graduate school for their guidance, and you might also consult our Open Access versus Traditional Publishing Guide.

Who can submit their dissertation?

ProQuest's policy is to accept master's theses and dissertations from all institutions which have been accredited by one of the six regional accrediting bodies (Middle States Association, New England Association, North Central Association, Northwest Association, Southern Association and Western Association) for inclusion in the ProQuest Dissertations & Theses database. Regional accreditation means that the accredited institutions are eligible for membership in the Council of Graduate Schools, which is the standard by which the higher education community judges itself. Master's theses and dissertations from independent medical and law schools accredited by the AMA and ABA are also accepted. Learn more.
